

Law enforcement agencies respond to allegations of illegal animal slaughter in St. Lucie

Kaila Jones Published 5.14pm ET Feb. 14 2024

“The animals were being brutalized,” Richard Couto founder and investigator with Animal Recovery Mission said. Couto witnessed the animals skinned and butchered alive while undercover. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”

Local, state and federal officials were on Godwin Road in St. Lucie County at what was described as an “illegal animal slaughter farm,” according to the animal welfare organization Animal Recovery Mission. The organization stated it conducted a six-month undercover investigation and got video of “violent, criminal acts against animals.”